Vote on whether local polls open again coming

BY DAN SINGLETON AND LEA SMALDON For the Review

Carstairs residents will know in a few days whether they go back to the polls in another federal election for the second time in six months.

The fate of the minority government hangs on next week's expected vote of confidence based on today's release of the federal budget and yesterday's speech from the throne that lead Parliament back into session after a two month hiatus.

A defeat in either of these two votes could lead constituents of Wild Rose and their counterparts across the country, back into an election. Governor General Michaelle Jean could also ask Liberal leader Michael Ignatieff to form a new government if the government is defeated on either of these votes.

In the week leading up to the resumption of the Parliament sitting, Wild Rose Conservative MP Blake Richards said he hopes the upcoming session will focus on the economy and not be hobbled by the infighting that characterized the last session.

The government has signalled its intentions to take Canada back into budgeted deficits for the first time in over 10 years with a budget that focuses on stimulating the conomy during the current economic Richards said he hopes the opposition parties will put aside plans to topple the government.

"People don't want an election right now," said Richards. "I'm hearing from most people that they would rather see that (an election) than allow the coalition that nobody had an opportunity to vote on. But I don't think people want to see an election either.

"As a government we really can't worry too much about what they are going to do. We have to worry about making sure we are doing what we think is right for the country and hope that the opposition will get on board. Obviously we have to look at what's right for the country."

The NDP and Bloc say they will not support the budget. Ignatieff has said he will take some time after the budget is released to make his decision and whether a coalition government (Liberal, NDP, Bloc) will try to lead the country.

Richards says he doesn't believe a coalition is the right way to go.
"To allow the separatist party (Bloc

"To allow the separatist party (Bloc Quebecois) to be part of the government is, to me, quite simply wrong. Right now we are in a time when we need a government to help us get through this time and that means everybody needs to work together. Hopefully they will work together with us."

Hopefully they will work together with us." The opposition coalition was formed late last year by the Liberals, NDP and Bloc Quebecois with the intention of replacing the Harper government. Parliament was prorogued before a confidence vote could be held.

Richards said budget deliberations went well and he has personally been pushing for tax cuts to be included.

"One of the things I have been pushing is that, yes, we need to stimulate the economy, but one of my points is we really do need to look at tax cuts as well," he said.
"If you give people more money to spend,

"If you give people more money to spend, it gives them more opportunity to support small businesses and if we can do that it will get money flowing through the economy.

my.

"One of the things I am strongly encouraging when we are looking at spending on infrastructure is, in my riding, seniors' housing. I think there is going to be a far bigger need for that in the next 10 to 15 years. If we are going to spend infrastructure money, we should be looking at that."

In brief

Richards consults with constituents

To many people, the federal government can sometimes seem like a distant, cold, impersonal entity

However, Wild Rose MP Blake Richards is hoping to change that perception by paying a monthly visit to some of the rural communities in his constituency, including Carstairs and Didsbury.

"With the riding as large and diverse as it is, some areas of the constituency felt like they just weren't getting the same opportunities (to express their concerns) as some of the communities that are more central," explains Richards.

This gives people the...opportunity to come in for office hours in their community, which I think is really important. That's the whole idea behind it."

Although anyone can always phone, email, or write a letter to their MP, face-toface interaction is sometimes the preferred mode of communication.

"A couple of people had personal things they were dealing with, with...different departments of the government," says Richards.

"That's obviously one of the main jobs we do as a Member of Parliament as well is try to assist people that are having problems with the federal bureaucracy."

According to Richards, the main concern expressed by his constituents is over the federal government's priorities for the 2009 budget, which will be presented on

"People all over the constituency have been making suggestions for that budget and what they'd like to see," says Richards, adding that he took those submissions into account when preparing his list of budget recommendations for Finance Minister Jim Flaherty.

Barring any unforeseen events, Blake Richards will be available to meet with members of the public at open houses on the third Thursday of each month from 3-5 p.m. in Didsbury at CIR Realty (1916 20

Seniors wanted for survey

A new survey of medication use by central Alberta seniors will hopefully lead to a better understanding of how to avoid adverse drug reactions that cause such things as memory loss, says lead things as memory lost researcher Dr. Scott Oddie.

'More than anything we are looking at better ways of identifying adverse drug interactions that might lead to problems with memory and attention," said Dr. Oddie, with Red Deer College.

"If we have better ways of identifying them (reactions), then we can work with both pharmacists and physicians to give people the means to prevent those types of reactions.

"We are looking at the types of meds, both over the counter and prescribed med-ications, that people are taking. And then through a series of questions and assess-ments, we look at memory and attention."

Starting this month, staff and students at Red Deer College are asking area residents to participate in the survey.

Participants will be asked questions such as 'Do you take any over-the-counter medications? What medications are you currently taking? How old are you?

The first phase of the survey began in 2006 and now researches are looking for additional participants to bring in new

"Right now we have 50 people in the study and we are looking to basically dou-ble that number," he said. "To really get some reliable results we need to get more people. The more rural areas we can incorporate the more diverse our data.

to improve the health and wellness of older adults in the years to come.

The new subdivision is expected to conct to the existing Stonebridge Glen subdivision, and contain two more entrances. one near the campground directly across from Centre Street and another attached

The area will house a large dry pond in its centre, with an underground storm management system that will carry water from the west side of town to the dry pond. The subdivision will also include series of pathways designed to link the town together.

The subdivision will contain three commercial districts: two areas along Hwy. 2A, and one beside the school. Commercial zoning will occupy 12 per cent of the subdivision's land.

Editorial Get on with it

DAN SINGLETON

With the resumption of the Parliamentary sitting this week, the Harper Conservatives have several pressing jobs they need to get on with in a big hurry – not the least being starting to address the deepening economic crisis.

After the Governor General granted Prime Minister Stephen Harper's request for a time out in Parliament, many Tory MPs, including Wild Rose MP Blake Richards and Red Deer MP Earl Dreeshen, said the government would spend the break preparing a plan to address the downturn.

Statistics Canada says 71,000 jobs were lost across the country in November, followed by 34,000 more in December. Together, the total is the worst since 1982.

Not surprisingly the opposition Liberals say the latest employment figures point to the need for immediate action – including for the government to make good on its assurances that it will make the economy its top priority.

The other opposition parties are saying the same thing, that the government needs to do more and do more now to address the economic downturn.

While the prorogation of Parliament has given all parties a chance to cool their heels, the ball is now in Prime Minister Harper's court.

Hopefully the Tories have made good use of the Parliament time-out they asked for to prepare a budget that will, as MP Richards says, help Canadians "get through this difficult time."

Hopefully all MPs are aware that any renewal of the in-fighting that brought Parliament to a grinding halt a month ago would be very, very unwelcome.

a month ago would be very, very unwelcome.

So here's the message for returned MPs: It's high time to put politics aside and start working on what matters to Albertans and other Canadians – jobs and economic security.

Letter to the editor Official Languages Act a big waste of money

These are difficult financial times for citizens of many countries in the world. Deficit financing by governments and financial bailouts by some governments appears to be the popular solution to get the economy up and moving again. We, the citizens, during this recession would also expect that our Members of Parliament and government leaders are also seeking ways to reduce government spending. There are a majority of Canadians who believe it is critical that governments weigh the cost of all policies against the benefits being achieved from these policies. The Official Languages Act of 1969 creating official bilingualism is an excellent example of a failed government policy that in 40 years has cost Canadian taxpayers and consumers hundreds of billions of dollars annually with no benefits for the majority of English speaking Canadians. The immediate end to this failed policy will reduce both government and consumer costs, with no negative affects to the unity of the country because Quebec has one official language of French. The percentage of bilingual Canadians outside of Quebec has remained virtually unchanged at less than five per cent in the past 40 years.

Commentary Avoiding a Chicken Little budget

KEVIN GAUDET

Any Canadian who has been listening to politicians and spin doctors lately would likely believe Canada's entire economy was teetering on edge. In truth, calm should be the order of the day, not panic. The sky is not falling. In fact, it is not even close to falling.

Granted, an economic acorn or two have fallen in Canada. These acorns have driven some to scurry around like Chicken Little stirring up a frenzy of calls for massive government intervention. Yet, we must remember a moral of Chicken Little: when one blindly buys into hysteria, the consequences can be dire.

Just how hysterical has the rhetoric become? A sober look at some of Canada's economic fundamentals reveals panic and over-reaction.

The most hysterical have been comparing our current economic down-turn to 'the Great Depression' when in the early 1930s unemployment in Canada peaked at 27 per cent and the market crash wiped-out almost 100 percent of sayings.

Others have compared today to the oil crisis and recession of the 1980s when unemployment rose from seven to 13 per cent. Some have even compared it to when the tech bubble burst in the 1990s, again boosting unemployment from seven to 12 per cent.

The current reality is much different.

From February 2008 through December 2008, unemployment in Canada has grown only slightly from a 33 year low of 5.8 percent to 6.6 percent, and is predicted to top out around 8 percent in 2009. While clearly this is moving in the wrong direction, it is nothing like 'the Great Depression.'

And while equities have fallen, they have not been wiped-out. From January 2007 to December 2008 Canada's equity markets have outperformed the United States S&P 500.

Canada's banking system is also stronger than others and still offers important access to capital for business and individuals. According to the Bank of Canada, less than half of businesses are reporting tighter access to credit. This number is up year-over-year but is roughly the same as it was in 2001-02, after the financial hiccup subsequent to 9/11. Canada's banks' strengths are due, in part, to bank leverage ratios being more cautious in Canada than the United States or the United Kingdom.

To be sure, Canada's Gross Domestic Product will not come close to the growth rate private sector forecasters had originally predicted. The economy will experience a technical recession – two consecutive quarters of negative growth – in the last three months of 2008 and the first three months of 2009. However, this recession is expected to be brief and flirting with zero growth. Zero growth is not ideal, but it isn't the recession of the 1980s either. Nor will it be like the 43 percent reduction in gross national product seen from 1929 to 1933. In fact, dueling forecasts even indicate a late-year recovery may generate positive GDP growth, albeit small, for 2009.

It is unclear whether or not they believed what they said, but during the past federal election every single party leader was adamant they would balance the next federal budget. The Prime Minister argued that Canada's economic fundamentals were strong. His government's economic update, only two months ago, stated that the government would make tough, pragmatic choices to protect the future by maintaining strong financial management. Little has changed since then, other than the political frenzy having intensified. The numbers confirm this. Credit access, unemployment, and Gross Domestic Product (GDP) are all off, but none substantially. Canada is better-off than many

Canada is better-off than many other countries and not nearly as vulnerable as too many are suggesting. The government should not over-react to this economic blip like Chicken Little over-reacted to the acorn falling on his head. Throwing taxpayer dollars around and even running up deficits in an attempt to "stimulate" the economy will do more damage than doing nothing at all. It would be better for Mr. Harper to save taxpayers from the spending wolves. He should balance the budget, and stay on a steady course, because the sky really isn't falling after all.

A life of music

BY TIM DENOUDSTEN Didsbury Review

Talk about a person of Music has been an important part of Didsbury resident Lynn Harbaugh's life for nearly as long as she can remember.

"I started singing when I was just an infant, really," says Lynn, whose father was a school choir direc-tor. "It's just sort of been part of my life; it's been my soul.

She has also never been shy about performing.

Lynn recalls that in Grade 2, she would stand on top of her desk and sing for about thirty seconds before the final bell of the day rang.

"I'd stand on the table, and the clock would be behind me, so it would look as if everyone was looking at me, but they're actually looking at the clock waiting for the bell to ring," she laughingly remembers.

Her first music lessons came several years later, when she began playing the upright bass with her sister, who played ukulele. Together, they would sing and play for various school and community functions in their hometown of Spokane, Wash. and even did some political campaigning.

When I was 15, we toured for a guy that was running for governor," Lynn explains. "It was great

This gave the duo the opportunity to sing and play music on street corers throughout the state. Unfortunately, the political candidate was ultimately defeated.

"He lost; we were devastated," recalls Lynn with a chuckle.

She later moved to Calgary and, together with then-husband Brad Luft, was instrumental in igniting the folk music boom in that city in the 1960s. Lynn's specialty is three-part harmony. That is, she is able to sing the soprano. alto and tenor parts of a song, which she records and then layers together.

"One of the things I've been able to do since I was pretty small was sing harmony to just about anyshe says. "I was just in so many choirs throughout my life that...you kind of come to have an understanding of harmony withbecause you've heard it."

Since she sings it all by ear, transcribing that music onto paper can be a labori-

"I have to write farrange ments] out, which is really painful," says Lynn. "I just sing what I do and then figure out what it is that I've done and then put it paper... The harmony thing is my obsession."

She also earned a mas ter's degree in education and - similar to her father spent many years with the Calgary school board organizing and teaching music courses for adults with the Calgary school board.

Lynn's daughter, Cara Luft, shares her love of music and was a founding member of folk group the Wailin' Jennys, which captured the Juno Award for Best Roots Album in 2005.

This mutual passion shouldn't be surprising, says Lynn.

"If we played golf, chances are she'd be playing golf.

Currently, Lynn is working on a five-song CD, which she plans to distribute for free once it is completed.

Everyone has some type of creative ability and should have the opportuni-ty to express it, she says.

"I think most folks think they can't do music or are not creative and think that's just such an unfortunate thing, because it isn't true.

To that end, she is inviting all area poets, singers or instrumentalists to share their talents in an upcoming Creativity Concert at Didsbury 5-0 Club on Feb. 8 at 2 p.m.

One song that Lynn will be presenting is called "Bacteria," which she says was inspired by a bottle of 'probiotic' pills that she once purchased.

"It said three billion of omething or other. I just burst into laughter and I thought, 'What have I done?" And then there was a song," she explains.

To get involved in the concert, contact Lynn Harbaugh at 403-335-3291 or David Gilchrist at 403-3012. The deadline to register is Feb. 5.

Admission to the event is free, but food bank donations will be accepted.

Didsbury Review

The shivers and chills felt by most at the fourth annual Rosebud Run Sleddog Classic near Didsbury this past weekend weren't just from anticipation and excite-

Temperatures at the race site dipped as low as -28 with the wind chill, making 2009 the coldest of the races to date.

This created some unique challenges for organizers, said race committee chair Bill Windsor.

"When it's cold like this, we have volunteers that are out on the trail and out on the course that have to get warmed up somehow," he said.

"It's been a learning experience. We have identified some things we have to do better.

Nevertheless, the trail was in excellent shape, with many of the 43 teams posting fast times, noted Rick Wannamaker, who helped to conceive the Didsbury race. Teams hailed from 14 different towns and cities in Alberta, Saskatchewan, and British Columbia.

While he typically competes in long-distance sled dog races, Wannamaker is cur-rently in the process of building a new dog team and so stayed home this year. Although Wannamaker didn't compete in any events, his wife Dena and daughter Rachel both fielded teams for the Rosebud Run, with Rachel winning the six-dog purebred event.

However, finishing first isn't all-important, according to Calgary musher Paul Rintoul.

"I'm just getting out and having fun with my dogs," he said.

The exhilarating speed of sled racing also contributes to its allure.

"It's addictive," said local musher Jessie

Byiers about the experience of flying along behind a sled with the wind blow ing in your face.

Dad Ray Byiers added that, rather than being just a winter racing machine, a sled dog provides year-round companionship.

"It's not an ATV," he noted with a smile. Jessie and his team of Siberian huskies took fourth place in the four-dog purebred open category.

Although this was the first time watch ing a sled dog event for Norm Haynes of Didsbury, he is certainly no stranger to racing. Prior to his retirement last year, Haynes had been the head judge of the chuckwagon races at the Calgary Stampede for over four decades.

"Any kind of racing is interesting," he said. "Animals, if they've got a chance, they're trying all the time."

Another spectator taking in the Rosebud Run for the first time was Katie Housek of Olds, who has been aboard a dog sled before.

"It's a pretty amazing feeling," she recalled. "It's a bit of a rush when you're going across good terrain with dogs that want to go fast."

At the close of the races on Sunday, the usual $5,500 in prize money was handed out, but for most of the mushers, the event is more about community than cash.

'Anybody that comes to a race of this nature is definitely not doing it for the money," Windsor explained. "The money is a nice bonus at the end of day, but they're going out for the camaraderie...[and] the opportunity to get out on a trail and run.

It's a complete community, the mushing community, and that's what they're being a part of."

Mom's Time out celebrates

Mom's Time Out (and Dad's too!) is celebrating its 20th year of providing parents a place to unwind and find support in Didsbury

The program was started by a group of moms wanting to create a place of understanding, friendship and support for other parents in Didsbury. Every Monday morning, since its beginning, we have had many parents around our table sharing stories, ideas and laughter. Our program has been hosted in a number of community venues that have helped us keep this program successful.

This year we have moved back to the Redeemer Lutheran Church's Fireside Room. There have been many children come through our doors as well and for the past 14 years Rosemarie Robillard has been caring for them and helping them learn valuable social skills This year Rosemarie has been joined by Tricia Neufeld to help with the babysitting portion of the program. The kids get a chance to run and play in the large gym and make new friends with kids their age. Our 20th year also brings a new director, Tessa Wilson, who is very excited to create fun mornings for parents and kids with various guest speakers, activities Parents are invited to join us every Monday morning from 10 to 11:30 a.m. This program is free to attend, however we do ask for $2/child (max $5/family) for babysitting. Infants and children not yet ready to play in the gym are welcome to stay with their parents in the Fireside Room. MS information events come to Didsbury

The MS Society of Canada hosted an MS Awareness Day and open house last Wednesday to provide residents in the Didsbury area with the latest MS informa-

The open house was at the Didsbury District Health Services office from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

There was also an evening session which offered information on behavioural progression, and MS Society services. "MS touches the lives of many people and their families in our community," said Beckie Nickerson, manager of Supportive Living with Didsbury District Health Services. "Education events such as this are a way to recognize and assist these people."

MS is a disease affecting the central nervous system (brain and spinal cord). It destroys the protective cov-ering of the nerve fibres, and sometimes the nerve fibres themselves, preventing signals from being transmitted from the brain and spinal cord to the rest of the

New domestic violence program begins

Did you know that according to Statistics Canada, Alberta has the highest rates of domestic violence in Canada? Sadly, domestic violence is a fact of life for too many families. In every community, across every socioeconomic status, women are emotionally and physically abused by their husbands, partners boyfriends. This is as true in rural areas as it is in cities. The impact on families is devastating. As society becomes less tolerant of abuse, we can create a climate of support and safety to help end the shame, fear, uncertainty and isolation felt by the majority of abused women Inspiring Change, a program of PSSAW, and with the support of Olds Neighborhood Place, Didsbury Neighborhood Place, and Carstairs FCSS is now serving the women of Mountain View County. Support services are offered to women who are at risk have been abused by their partners or spouses. Group work will be available as well as one-on-one mentors. Special events, workshops and seminars related to women's life circumstances are also in the works.

Volunteer opportunities are available as group facili-tators or mentors to work with and help the women and children in our community live violence free lives Stay tuned for more information coming regarding volunteer information sessions to be held in Olds, Didsbury and Carstairs.

For support, including safety planning, information, resources and referrals, please call Inspiring Change at 403.556.8909. All services are free and confidential. Remember, you are not alone.

If you know or suspect someone is being abused, you can also call to find out how you can provide information and support to someone you care about

Fire dept. seeks volunteers

BY TIM DENOUDSTEN Didsbury Review

When fires, floods or other emergency situations strike, firefighters play a critical role in protecting their communities.

The Didsbury Fire Department is cur-rently looking for additional volunteer firefighters to assist in times of need.

Due to the economic climate, some current volunteers are relocating to other communities in search of work explains Didsbury Fire Chief Rick Mousseau.

Currently, there are about 25 volunteer members on call. The department's goal is to get that number up to 30.

There aren't many prerequisites to join and all training and equipment are provided, says Mousseau.

However, there are a few things that prospective volunteers should keep in

'Make sure you...are willing to commit your time, especially, and, if you are working, that your employer is willing to let you go to a call," Mousseau advises, adding that applicants should be in good health and able to cope with high-pressure scenarios.

Weekly training sessions for volunteers are held every Wednesday at 7 p.m at the Didsbury fire hall, located at 2101 19 Ave.

For more information about becoming a volunteer firefighter, attend a weekly meeting or contact the Fire Department at (403) 335-3222

Didsbury Tykes #1 defend Bowden tourney crown

For the second year in a row the Didsbury Tykes #1 Hockey team has come out on top at the Bowden Blades

Didsbury's first round action pitted the locals against the Red Deer Vipers. From the drop of the puck the Ramblers skat-ed hard and put up a wall anytime the Vipers entered the Didsbury zone. Stellar defence and a quick counterattack proved too much for the squad from Red Deer as Didsbury handed the Vipers a 13-0 loss.

Earning hat tricks were Corsen Waiting, Austin Overwater, and Kaleb Brander. Jolin Bischkedented the twine once as did Ella Schindel. Quick hands and relentless pressure enabled Jacob Fifield and Mckenna Dussault to score their first goals of their hockey careers. Next up was Didsbury's northern rivals

from Olds

Olds came out firing on all cylinders and had the locals reeling for much of the first two periods.

A quick chat from the coaches and a renewed focus going into the third peri-od saw the Ramblers fight back from a three goal deficit to score five unan-swered goals to win the game 10-8.

Goal scorers for Didsbury were Corsen Waiting (3), Kaleb Brander (3), Austin Overwater (1) and Ella Schindel (3).

Didsbury was only able to achieve the win through stellar goaltending from Gabriel Pankrat, Grace Krieser and

The win moved Didsbury into the final against the rough and tumble squad from Didsbury knew this would be a tough game as earlier in the year the two teams had fought to a 9-9 tie. Action was quick and at times borderline fierce and once again the Ramblers found themselves down by two goals going into the third period.

A couple of early saves from Emma Overwater and some key faceoff wins by William Jensen seemed to turn the momentum towards Didsbury and once again they dominated the third period.

The Ramblers fought back to tie the game late and that set up the heroics. With only 14 seconds left on the clock Grace Kreiser found a loose puck in front of the Crossfield net and fired a wicked snapshot that the goalie couldn't handle. All that was left was for Ella Schindel to knock in the rebound and set off the celebrations. The clock ran down and the Ramblers had clinched the Bowden tournament with an 8-7 victory. Goal scorers were Corsen Waiting (3), Kaleb Brander (2), Ella Schindel (2) and Austin Overwater (1). The coaching staff and parents are all proud of the team and their efforts and invite you all to come on out and cheer on the stars of tomor-
